

UNDERGRADUATE POSTER SESSIONS – 2017 SRSA CONFERENCE!

We have a new, exciting opportunity for undergraduate students at the 2017 SRSA Conference which will be held in Memphis, Tennessee, from March 30 to April 1, 2017. For the first time, the 2017 SRSA conference will include a special undergraduate research poster session as well as other activities targeted at exposing undergraduate students to research and regional science and making the conference meaningful for participating undergraduates.

The poster session will include 3 to 5 minute presentations by each student describing the poster and research, followed by informal browsing and discussion about the posters.

To encourage participation, SRSA will waive the registration fee for undergraduate students who participate in this session. However, to ensure some level of quality, each student will be required to have a faculty sponsor (whether or not the sponsor is able to attend).

Since we hope this session will encourage exploration of regional science and research by undergraduate students, we will accept a relatively broad range of research topics.
